EUROCLIO BOARD IN 1996

ADDRESS OF THE EUROCLIO SECRETARIAT

The fall of the Iron Curtain in 1989 opened up new ideas about history and history education, in both Eastern and Western Europe. New textbooks are being written and teachers are being re-educated. History education, more than any other subject, affects the way people regard their neighbouring states and people. As a result the importance of the development of multiperspectivity, mutual understanding and international cooperation have increased. The new Europe offers not only splendid opportunities but also calls for an enhanced cooperation. This is EUROCLIO's objective.

HISTORY OF EUROCLIO

Encouraged by the Council of Europe the representatives of 17 national and regional Associations for History Teachers decided during a congress in Strasbourg in 1992, to establish EUROCLIO: The European Standing Conference of History Teachers Associations. The official launching of EUROCLIO took place on April 21, 1993 in Leeuwarden in the Netherlands. Today (1997) EUROCLIO represents about 60.000 history teachers in more than 40 countries. EUROCLIO is acknowledged as a non-governmental organization by the Council of Europe and is without political, philosophical or religious affiliations. The Standing Conference recognizes the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the European Convention on Human Rights, the convention of human rights issued by the United Nations and the Unesco recommendations relevant to history teaching.

AIMS AND ACTIVITIES OF EUROCLIO

EUROCLIO aims at strengthening the position of history in the curriculum of schools throughout Europe. It promotes innovation in history education and the intellectual freedom of teachers, in order to equip students with a critical, democratic and international outlook. It encourages the development of a greater European awareness through history teaching without neglecting global, national and regional dimensions.

To reach these aims EUROCLIO is gathering and disseminating knowledge and information on history teaching on a European level. Over the years it has accumulated a unique collection of materials and an extended network of members. To preserve the continuity of both this collection and network, EUROCLIO developed itself into a European Information and Documentation Centre for History Teaching. Furthermore EUROCLIO provides a forum for history teachers in Europe to meet each other, share their knowledge and experience and discuss matters of common interest. Therefore EUROCLIO initiates and organizes conferences, seminars, working groups and exchange-programs. EUROCLIO is connecting history teachers through their national and regional Associations of History Teachers and therefore promotes the founding of associations where they do not exist yet. In the previous years new Associations of History Teachers have been founded in Albania, the Baltic states Poland and Ukraine. To inform its members EUROCLIO publishes a bulletin twice a year and maintains an internet homepage. Every year a General Assembly is held. During these meetings the members of EUROCLIO discuss the developments of the previous year and decide on the policy for the following year.

One of EUROCLIO's main assignments lies in the field of consultancy. EUROCLIO has gathered a specific know how in the field of history education and acts as an expert and advisory body for governments, international and national organizations, educational research institutions and educational publishers. In 1996 EUROCLIO was involved in consultancy in Albania, Belarus, Estonia, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Latvia, Moldova, Poland, Russia and Ukraine. EUROCLIO provides an extended network for all who are in one way or another attached to history teaching in Europe and outside. EUROCLIO is also involved in several national and international in-service training programmes for history teachers. EUROCLIO has contributed to the development of new textbooks and teaching materials, and particularly to the use of new media like internet and e-mail in history education. Representatives of EUROCLIO have lectured as experts on numerous occasions all over Europe during the last years.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES OF EUROCLIO IN 1996

March 21-24, 1996 General Assembly and conference on: 'History teaching: a key to democracy?' in Neuchâtel, Switzerland. This conference was organised under the patronage of the Council of Europe. EUROCLIO members from France, Norway, Portugal and Poland talked about the question: 'What are the relations between history education and democracy?' Other lectures were given by

EUROCLIO Board 1996

Mr. Jean Cavadini, member of the Swiss Chamber of State: 'The case of Switzerland - a (source of) inspiration for Europe?', and Mr. Maitland Stobart, deputy director of Education, Culture and Sport from the Council of Europe: 'Tensions between political ideology and history teaching. To what extent may history teaching serve a cause, even if it is meant well?' Subsequently the 65 participants from 30 European countries discussed these issues in working groups. The main conclusions pointed at the contribution of history teaching to the development and maintenance of democracy in a society. History teaching is an important tool to get young people accustomed to democratic practice and principles. However the need was also emphasized of a critical approach towards democracy in history education to prevent one-sidedness and indoctrination.

May 6-12 1996 In-service teacher training seminar: 'Explore the unknown Europe, History and History education in the Baltic states', held in Jurmala, Latvia. This conference was a result of cooperation between EUROCLIO and the Baltic History Teachers Associations. 50 participants from Belgium, Denmark, Estonia, Great-Britain, Latvia, Lithuania, the Netherlands, Russia and Sweden attended lectures and working groups on the history and the challenges and problems of history education in the Baltic states since their renewed independence in 1991. As the teaching of the national history of the Baltic states was more or less forbidden

* EUROCLIO conference 'History, a Key to Democracy' and General Assembly in Neuchâtel, Switzerland.

* EUROCLIO participation in the EU LILIS-conference, 'Lifelong Learning for the Information Society' in Genua, Italy.

* Day-seminar in the Netherlands on history education with British experts organized by WIEG with help of EUROCLIO.

APRIL 1996

* Preparation of MATRA projects with the Baltic States and Russia.

* EUROCLIO performs as an expert on a seminar in Pskov on 'Modern Approaches on History Teaching', Russia, organized by the Centre for Educational innovation in St Petersburg and Kultur Kontakt in Austria.

* Meeting in Hamburg with the Körber Stiftung to prepare international participation in the Schülerwettbewerb, to provide information about Internet History Classes, exploration of the possibilities of an European History Magazine and other topics concerning history education.

* EUROCLIO participation in a German-Dutch conference on the presentation of the neighbour in history textbooks by SLO in Enschede, the Netherlands.

MAY 1996

* Meeting in Budapest to plan the General Assembly of EUROCLIO in Hungary, March 1997

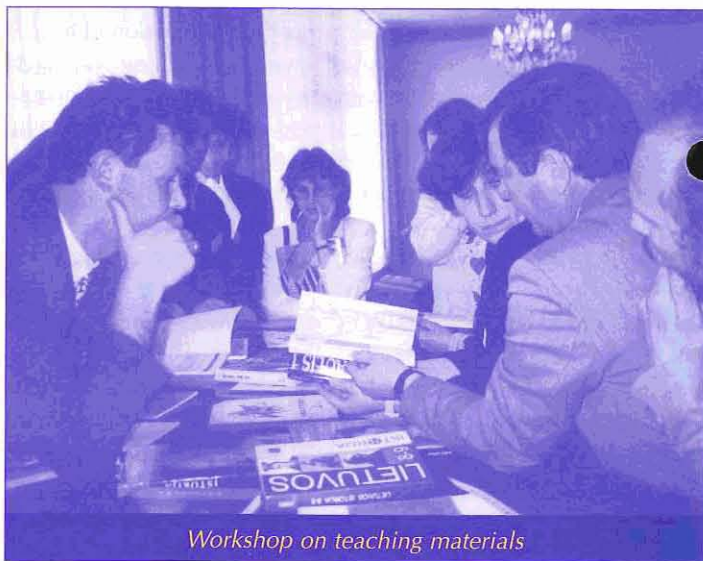

* EUROCLIO chairs an expert meeting in Budapest on a textbook and teaching materials on European Integration, specially prepared for Hungary.

* Conference 'Explore the Unknown Europe'. In-service seminar on Baltic History and History Education.

* EUROCLIO is asked to during the Soviet era, complete new books and methods had to be developed. The main problem is limited financial resources. Teachers often have to develop their own methods and curricula with primitive resources. Computers, copiers and modern textbooks are often not available, chalk and blackboard have to do the job! An exchange of methods and skills took place between the teachers, and the conference was an inspiring experience for all.

September 4-14 1996 Seminar 'Modern approaches in History Education' Susdal, Russia. This seminar with 45 participants was held in the framework of a long-term MATRA project on history education in Estonia and Russia. MATRA is a project of the Dutch ministry of Foreign Affairs that aims to support countries in transition to democratic government. The seminar was organized by EUROCLIO and MIROS, the Moscow Institute for Educational Development. The main aim of the seminar was the exploration of the viability of a longer term project on modern methods of history education, especially focusing on democratic values and the practice of democratic techniques with pupils. The seminar consisted of workshops, expert lectures and the development of a follow-up project. The discussions, which went on into the late hours, centred around the place of Russian history in the curriculum. On the one side the need is felt to build a Russian national identity, on the other side an international and multicultural approach of Russian history is essential. There is a strong need for modern methods and methodology. Especially the use of visual and textual sources in history education was demonstrated and discussed. As result of this seminar new teaching materials will be developed on contemporary Russian history and implemented in Russian schools. It is intended to found a History Teachers Association.

September 24-29 1996 EUROCLIO conference: 'Democracy and the welfare state - New approaches in history teaching', Copenhagen, Denmark. This conference was the result of cooperation between the Associations of History Teachers of Denmark, the Netherlands and Sweden and fitted into the framework of an in-service training programme which is supported by the European Union Socrates/Comenius Programme. The first aim of the conference was the sharing of knowledge and viewpoints on methods of teaching the history of the welfare state in European countries. The exchange took place through lectures, workshops about innovatory approaches and visits to schools. Emphasis was placed on the idea that a welfare state is not self-evident, but something which over the years has grown up in some countries under favourable economical and political circumstances. To preserve it in the future, the welfare state has to be maintained carefully. The 60 participants from Denmark, Estonia, Germany, Hungary, Latvia, the Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Russia, Scotland, Sweden and Ukraine established many international contacts.

October 26-31 1996 Seminar 'Modern approaches in History Education', Lohusola, Estonia. This seminar focused on the similar aims as the seminar in Russia in September 1996, but the program was adapted to the situation in the Baltic states. The seminar also was part of a long-term MATRA project and was organized by EUROCLIO in cooperation with the Estonian and Latvian Associations of History Teachers. The seminar was attended by 30 Estonian and Latvian participants and 6 experts from Finland, England, the Netherlands and Scotland. All participants were very positive and were inspired to try to apply new ideas in their teaching. The need for the production of a good teacher's handbook including examples, materials and guidelines for history teachers about how to improve their lessons and curricula was emphasised. The seminar resulted in a grant application for the development and implementation of a new teachers handbook in Estonia, Latvia and Russia under the supervision of EUROCLIO.

Spring 1996-autumn 1997 Foreign participation in the German 'Schülerwettbewerb Deutsche Geschichte um den Preis des Bundespräsidenten'. For the first time foreign pupils took part in this German contest which is held every two years. In this contest pupils between the age of 12 to 19 have to do independent historical research on a topic which is related to a general theme which is fixed every two years by the German Körber Stiftung, the organizers of the Schülerwettbewerb. The theme for 1996 was 'Zwischen Armenhaus und Suchtberatung! Zur Geschichte des Helfens' ('Between poorhouse and drug addict relieve. On the history of care'). The participation of Dutch pupils in the Schülerwettbewerb acted as a mutual reconnaissance for the future participation of foreign pupils in the Schülerwettbewerb by identifying the problems and obstacles that have to be removed. This EUROCLIO pilot-project is important because it adds an international aspect to a successful modern educational concept and widens the view of both pupils and teachers involved. After the evaluation recommendations were made to facilitate foreign participation in the Schülerwettbewerb of 1998-99.
