

Candidates EuroClio Board

Ann-Laure Lieval

Member of APHG Association des Professeurs d'Histoire et de Géographie

I graduated from Artois University (Arras, France) with a Master in Ancient Greek History, and passed the Agrégation externe d'Histoire in Lille (France) in 2003. I have been teaching History, Geography and CLIL in Lycee Fenelon, Lille, since 2005. I am a member of APHG (French association of History and Geography teachers), which is a member of EuroClio network, and helped organized the 25th annual conference in Marseille in 2018. I became a EuroClio ambassador this year. I also teach in Sciences Po Lille and at Lille university as a member of CAPES externe jury (national teaching contest).

Gijs van Gaans

Member of VGN – Dutch Association of History and Citizenship Educators

I studied history at Radboud University Nijmegen, where I became enchanted with the study ancient religions. After completing my studies, I taught history and Latin in secondary schools, but being interested in religions I also studies religious sciences in the meantime, further specialising in Early Church History. After a few years I got a position as a teacher trainer/lecturer in history and religious education at Fontys University of Applied Sciences. Inspired by some new colleagues I decided to focus my work on the learning of history and religious education. Although early religions are still a beloved personal hobby, at this moment my main areas of work concern a more enquiry-based approach in both subjects, and an education that helps people to understand each other across cultures. Therefore, I am doing my PhD on sensitive histories in the classroom, concentrating on strategies that would enable dialogues concerning contested heritage. Besides all this I am also member of the Historiana Learning Team, trying to embody the EuroClio mission through the development of online teaching materials and international trainings.
